What's wrong with a few weeds anyway?

Ever dreamed of a weed-free lawn? Considering the tenacity of weeds, it's hard to imagine such a thing is possible. For example, one dandelion produces up to 15,000 seeds, which can survive up to six years in the soil! When it comes to weeds, if you give an inch, you give a mile.

To get victory over weeds, you need to get at the underlying problems. A weak lawn promotes weeds, so the best way to control dandelions and other weeds in your yard is to grow a thick, vigorous lawn. Dense grass crowds out weeds and blocks the sunlight that their seeds need to germinate.

When your lawn is stressed, it's ripe for takeover by weeds. Relieve the stress by watering your lawn deeply. This encourages deeper root growth. You should also mow your lawn at a higher setting, which helps shade weed seeds so it's harder for them to grow. Proper feeding of your lawn at regular intervals helps it thicken up and fill in bare spots, making them less welcoming to weeds. Follow the adage "the best offense is a good defense," and you're on your way to winning the game.
